Celebrates WildlifeCampus 20 years

WildlifeCampus CEO

Todd Kaplan

The World has changed! So much of what we've always taken for granted is now subject to rules, regulations, protocols and procedures.

Right now, our lives are on hold in so many ways - plans abandoned, trips delayed and adventures cancelled. In the midst of all the chaos, what hasn't changed is WildlifeCampus, our quality courses, commitment to excellence in education and the support of our students.

As WildlifeCampus celebrates our 20th year in the industry, I reflect back on origins of the adventure, created as an educational initiative for AfriCam.com

"Some 20 years ago, we were six months into the development of the website, but we had still not finalised a name.

AfriCollege was the first choice, followed by WildCollege, but all suggestions had been discarded in favour of WildCampus. We all loved the name and developed some creative ideas, but we had a problem.

The URL, wildcampus.com had already been registered by somebody else. Since no site had been developed using the name, we assumed the owner would part with it relatively easily, but he still wanted US$ 8,000 for it.

AfriCam at the time had significant development capital, but US$ 8,000 was ± R70,000 back then, an exorbitant sum of money for essentially a US$20 name.

Our designs were in vain. The owner of WildCampus.com would not budge from his US$ 8,000, which we were not prepared to pay. The team brainstormed new ideas for hours. Ideas were no problem, but we had the familiar problem of not being able to find a domain name that was not already registered by somebody else.

Early one evening, Keith Wallington AfriCam's marketing director and I were sitting around brainstorming the "name issue" for the hundredth time; literally by randomly typing names into a domain registration site. Keith typed in "WildlifeCampus". I thought it was a little wordy, but it qualified on the key criteria: it was available. Keith typed the company credit card number into the computer and WildlifeCampus was christened."

In future editions we'll delve back for more on the WildlifeCampus origin-story, but for now enjoy the current issue.

WildlifeCampus Kids Big-5 Course

Is here!

We've had many requests for a course designed for kids and finally the first of many is here! With changing times and increasing amounts of time spent at home this is the perfect course to keep the kids busy. The course can be completed online with no time limit and parents are welcome to assist their children.

World's 5 best-known African animals are all closely examined in this short course designed just for kids.

Lion, Leopard, Elephant, African Buffalo and Rhinoceros are all explored in terms of their classification, vital statistics, habitat, social structure, feeding behaviour, reproduction, general ecology and conservation status.

This course is completely FREE*
In addition, the downloadable PDF contains a number of fun activities

* A course certificate may be redeemed at a cost of R 250

Anti-Poaching Field Update

A name certainly popping out on the list is Aldine Lombard who is the first female to have successfully completed the GameWays Anti-Poaching practical.

Congratulations and good luck to all graduates on the journey ahead!

We trust you will make a big difference in protecting our endangered wildlife and valuable nature!

At the end of March, the first GameWays Anti-Poaching course for 2020 came to an end with the official graduation parade at GameWays in Limpopo. While we were unable to attend, WildlifeCampus is extremely proud of the 12 students who have successfully completed their practical training journey.

You can make a difference!

The GameWays Anti-Poaching course equips students with all the necessary knowledge and practical training, to enable them to take a stand against crime and poaching activities taking place in our country.

The 2,200 Hectare GameWays training facility is ideal for anti-poaching training. GameWays is located just outside Steenbokpan, about 70 km West of Lephalale, in the stunning Limpopo bushveld.

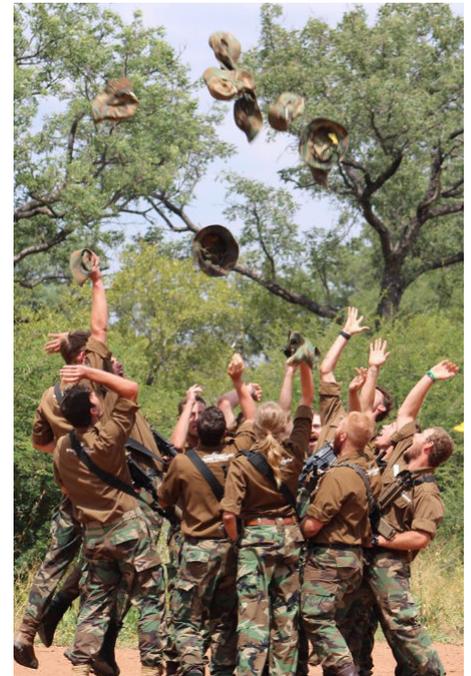

WildlifeCampus Anti-Poaching

When deciding to embark on a practical training journey, GameWays will register applicants as online students with WildlifeCampus.

Phase 1 of the training process requires students to complete the WildlifeCampus Online Anti-

Poaching Course over the period of one month.

After successfully completing the online course, students receive a WildlifeCampus certificate. This certificate forms part of the admission requirements to participate in the practical training at GameWays.

Updated Course

Spotlight

During the December Holidays WildlifeCampus and Co* headed out to Maloti-Drakensberg Park (UNESCO World Heritage Site) to summit Mafadi (South Africa's highest peak). The primary goal of our trip was sourcing adequate pictures to update our Online Wilderness Navigation Course.

The result - a freshly updated course with stunning imagery serving as a great guideline on how to find your way in the wilderness by relying only on your equipment and your surroundings..

Our Wilderness Navigation Course is a practical navigation course for all hikers, trampers, mountaineers, orienteering enthusiasts, outdoor leaders, teachers, scouts, guides, adventure racers, rescue teams and anyone else who ventures "Anyplace Wild". It is written by master navigator, Andrew R Friedemann, this may be the most valuable course you will ever study. Navigation is a skill that can be learnt by anyone; developing a proficiency in this ability can save your life and will significantly enhance your experiences when venturing into the outdoors.

* The WildlifeCampus team would like to thank our good friends Danny Breetveld (The Netherlands) and South African filmmaker Robert Wedderburn for joining Jonathan Acx on this awesome mission!

Wildlife Management News

In February WildlifeCampus' partner Hillcrest Game Estates was awarded the North West Wildlife Traders (NWWT) 2020 Wildlife/Game-farmer of the Year Award.

Franco Joubert, founder and managing director of NWWT said that this is the sixth-year running that this prestigious award has been presented. The criteria for this particular award are not so much about who is the biggest and the best, but rather about giving due recognition to wildlife/game farmers who have been showing to be truly interested and involved in making a difference in the South African game and wildlife industry, particularly in the current difficult times in which the industry finds itself.

The winner was selected from North West Wildlife Traders roughly 500-600 clients.

Congratulations to Hillcrest Game Estates on this well deserved award!

Cultural Guiding News

If you are a keen traveller, existing or aspiring cultural guide, professional nature guide, field guide, or merely have an interest in this extensive topic, these courses are definitely an entertaining and educational programme to consider!

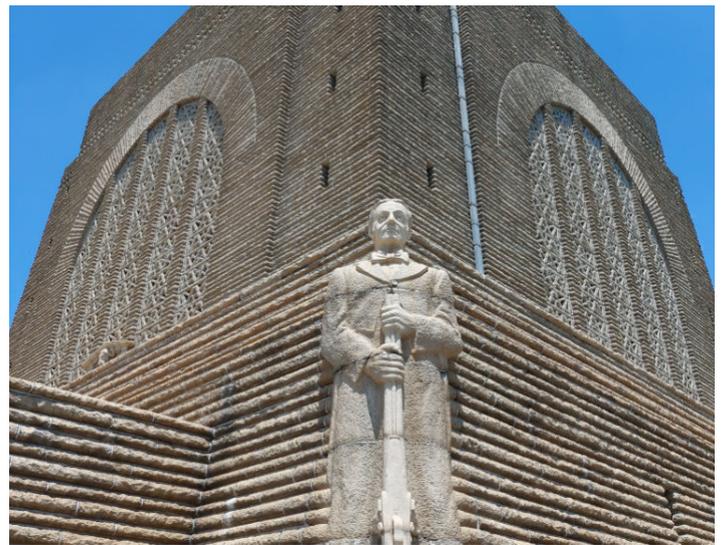

Our Cultural Guiding Courses are currently being updated! Eastern Cape, Gauteng and KwaZulu Natal are fully updated! Limpopo, Mpumalanga, Western Cape, Northern Cape, and Free State Provinces are all currently being updated for mid-2020 release.

Whether you are career-orientated or simply wish to upskill to provide a more inclusive experience for your guests and clients, our Cultural Guiding Series is an excellent resource.

Take a virtual tour with us as we explore the Provinces and meet the people of beautiful South Africa! Each Cultural Guiding Course covers a Province in South Africa. In each course we include:

- A General Provincial Overview
- A Cultural Overview
- A Historical Overview
- A Nature and Conservation Overview
- In-depth information on Villages, Towns and Cities
- Map Orientations
- Municipal Districts
- Tourist Attractions and Regions

Students who successfully complete the course will be awarded a certificate for the province completed.

Game Lodge Management

News

Are you interested in a career in the hospitality industry? However, you're not sure which department would suit you? Have a look at a brief rundown by Wild dreams Recruitment of what each department entails.

Food and Beverage

This is often one of the largest departments within the hospitality industry as it covers a few departments who have very different duties. If you see the abbreviation F&B then this is food and beverage.

Within this department you have the following:

- Waiter/Waitress
- Bar tenders
- Butlers
- Scullers
- Commis Chefs
- Pastry Chefs
- Chef de parties
- Sous Chefs
- Head/Executive Chefs
- F&B Managers
- Hosts / Hostesses / Anchors/Guest relations

One very big difference is that some of these jobs are front of house and some are back of house.

If you enjoy talking to people and are confident to communicate with people from around the world then considering a waiter, bar, butler or host role would suit you. Often these positions overlap, and you may be a waiter and a bar tender at the same time. These positions suit people who are quick on their feet and can multitask.

Chefs on all levels need to be creative and really have a passion for cooking. If this sounds like you, then working in the kitchen (behind-the-scenes) is the place to be. As you learn more you can progress to a higher level or find which aspect of working in the kitchen you really enjoy.

An F&B Manager would oversee all aspects of front and back of house so it would suit someone who is great with people, not only guests and customers but with staff as well. Knowledge of overall service in the department would be essential and although the F&B Manager doesn't always do the cooking, having a background in cooking would be a great help.

Reception/Office related roles

Working in Reception may make you think of lots of admin work, however, in the hospitality industry this often entails much more than sitting behind a computer all day.

Within this department you have the following:

- Receptionists
- Admin assistants
- Office Manager
- Financial Manager
- Debtor/Creditor
- HR Manager
- Reservationist

The skills needed in this department are good computer knowledge, as well as great telephone and writing skills. You are also often the face of the establishment being the first person a guest or customer sees, so you need to be presentable, friendly and confident in communicating with people.

It's also a department where you will need a good knowledge of numbers. Although we all have calculators there is often invoicing, petty cash, reports, tips, and sales all managed in this department.

Game Lodge Management News

Multi-tasking is also a must-have skill in this department.

If you are employed in a specific role then it will be important to have in-depth knowledge about this aspect of the industry. For example, in the HR sector then an understanding of things like labour law and employment equity will be a must.

In the Lodge industry the reception staff will normally also host meals, so this integrates with the F&B department nicely and having that warm outgoing personality is key to success in this area.

Guides and Trackers

This department is only related to the lodge sector (not restaurant and hotels)

Within this department you have the following:

- Guides
- Head Guide / Assistant Head Guide
- Trackers

Guides and trackers work as a team with their roles to provide the guests with an amazing, once-in-a-lifetime wildlife experience.

Guides and Trackers need to be conservation minded at all times and pass on their passion for nature and conservation through the game drives and bush walks they provide for guests.

Knowledge about animals, plants, trees, geology, insects, birds, conservation and tracks/signs of animals is vital. It will also help to have a background knowledge on drinks and food as Guides are often hosting guests at meals and need to be clued up on what is being served.

Any photographic knowledge is an advantage. Many guests will have cameras and would want to take pictures to enable them to have memories of their trip. Its also important, as a guide, that you get your vehicle positioned in the best photographic spot.

With these roles knowledge and passion go hand-in-hand and without these you won't be successful. So, if you love wildlife and the bush then get studying as you do need a formal qualification to become a Guide or a Tracker.

Housekeepers

This department is more than just cleaning rooms, its about creating a guest experience through small touches and attention to details.

Within this department you have the following:

- Head or Senior Housekeeper
- Housekeepers
- Laundry department

Housekeepers need to have excellent attention to detail skills and the ability to thoroughly check areas to make sure all areas are clean, neat and tidy at all times. Housekeepers should also be cognisant of any maintenance-related issues.

Pride in their work is very important and if they can be creative with small touches such as towel arrangements, flowers, notes in the rooms. Itf will make a big difference to the guests stay.

How clean and tidy an establishment is, will also be important to any guest.

Maintenance

This department is very hands-on, there can still be admin but it's also about getting things fixed as quickly as possible and preventing problems in the first place. It can be one of the busiest departments if you are in a large lodge as there are many aspects that fall under maintenance.

Game Lodge Management News

Within this department you have the following:

- Maintenance manager
- Assistant Maintenance manager
- Maintenance workers
- Gardeners

These positions are suited to people who are very 'handy' who know how to fix things and can make a plan! Its good to have a technical mind when working in this department and also attention to detail and the knowledge to be able to see a problem before it starts. This department often deals with health and safety as well, which is vitally important so a background in these aspects would help.

In the Hospitality industry having a good overall knowledge of different maintenance related aspects would be beneficial as no two days are ever the same so although its good to specialist it's also important to have a good general knowledge and of course don't be afraid to get your hands dirty!

Management

This department is often made up of people who have already worked in other departments as it is rare to be able to immediately walk into a Management position within the industry without any background knowledge. It may be that you start as a waiter and then get promoted throughout your career, including to front-of-house, head of department and, finally, management.

Within this department you have the following:

- General Managers
- Operations Manager
- Assistant Managers

For these roles you need to be a multi-tasker, a people's person which includes interacting with guests, clients but also staff and have a good overall understand of how every single department works. An admin/financial mind is also required as the role will include a fair amount of admin.

If you have a strong personality, you are also able to work hard and help where needed, then this may be the job for you. Do everything you can to move through the departments and take opportunities for promotions as they come to you. Once you are a Manager, have confidence in your abilities and be a warm and open person and you will have great success.

Whichever department you currently work in or are hoping to work in, in future it is vital to have passion for the industry as the hospitality sector means long hours-expect to work weekends, public holidays and although most of the time you have lovely guests and customers you will have challenging days! So, focus on the positives and enjoy life in this crazy but very fun industry.

Our Response to Your Question

“Will I be able to study as usual in the event of a lockdown?”

For sure!

All WildlifeCampus activities will continue as usual. Students may take online courses from anywhere in the world, anytime.

Many students have contacted us with concerns regarding the closure of WildlifeCampus during the South African lockdown. To set your minds at ease, WildlifeCampus will not be closing and our team is only an email away!

We would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone the very best during the lockdowns happening globally. Please, stay safe. It won't be too long before we are allowed back in the bush once again!

For those who have booked tours to, or within, SA - please don't cancel but rather postpone. The same applies to everyone who has booked practical training, please support our practical training providers by postponing your training, rather than cancelling.

Africa is waiting for you to explore when this is all over.

Hang in there!

Lockdown madness?

WildlifeCampus activities continue as usual.
